Well No.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and well-being of older people, and to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of older people.

The strategy for older people is based on three main principles: (1) to improve the health and well-being of older people, (2) to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of older people, and (3) to ensure that older people are able to live independently and actively. The strategy for older people is a key part of the government's commitment to improve the health and well-being of older people, and to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of older people.
